

Blending Organic Living and Feng Shui

Today we find ourselves with all the various conveniences of medical research, transportation and telecommunications. These have all contributed to the improvement of our lives, whether it is the quality of experience or the enhanced expectancy of our life. However, the Western civilization, has suffered the influences of our progressions by including the petrochemical hard slog in nearly everything we own in consumer products. We are the reason that such areas as transnational pharmaceuticals stand as well as they do. It is no wonder that we are hindered by our own general well being achievements.

Where then, will be the place to find health and happiness in the world of such wealth as our own undoing? It is simple simplicity itself. That is the answer, we can embrace consumer products with the least acumination of chemically poisonous counterparts. Even if its practice and processing evolved from bringing harmony into our own lives. We can limit the chemicals we introduce into our personal and global environment. We can arrange our lives, while encouraging the allowance of positive energy that flows. The practice of feng shui and certified organic consumer products are excellent aids for achieving this.

Organic Living - Unless you live in a rural area, you would be surprised by the reliance of industrial agriculture upon pesticides and fertilizers to maintain and grow various consumer crops. For instance, just one cotton T-shirt has over one pound of combined chemicals present. During farming and processing, unlimited chemicals which are harmful to us and our environment are diffused back to us daily, while we constantly introduce or absorb them while using or wearing such items.

We can reduce the influence of man, while passing on a wholesome planet to our children by the use of natural crops, such as produce from certified organic processing. Organic products encourage the positive flow of energy within our bodies, rather than hampering our good health and well being with toxic chemicals.

We can pass a healthy world onto our descendants by using naturally sustainable crop materials, such as those produced by certified organic processes, concurrently reducing our own harmful consequences. Organics aid positive energy to flow within our bodies easily, rather than interfere with chemicals in and upon our body and skin.

The simplicity and emphasis on natural materials of practicing feng shui and organic living are similar. Organic living tends to avoid chemical products in lieu of naturals, whereas feng shui pivots on base elements such as wind, water, wood, earth, metal and fire. While shopping choose natural, certified organic materials. They do not transmit toxins and they encourage the flow of chi in your environment.

The feng shui scheme of preferred colors blends in perfectly with materials which are organic in nature, since there are natural sources of dyes used in organic materials. Various lovely earth tones and hues of greens, browns, orange and beige are featured in organic materials, while various applications of feng shui make good use of such natural colors of pastel yellows, greens, beige and browns. When considering natural colors into your personal space the blending of organics and feng shui fit well with one another.

Feng shui emphasizes de-cluttering, while organic living emphasizes reducing personal impact on the environment. Blending these two eliminates all those things you do not need in your home, by either recycling or reusing them, while only purchasing items that are environment friendly and of high quality. Natural, new products unite effortlessly into the chi energy of your home.

This is something to consider while changing your life, for you can only take things a step at a time. After overcoming the sluggishness of standard living, you will feel motivated to encourage the exchange of the planet and your positive flow of energy. It is up to you of course, but know, that you are not alone, we are here with you at every step.
